“Genuinely moving and beautifully filmed”

English Dance and Song, Autumn 2019

For the first time in a documentary film, the remarkable story of George Butterworth (1885 - 1916), his music, life and times. Drawing on newly discovered archival treasures, including the letters and memoirs of those who knew him best, and featuring music by the London Philharmonic Orchestra with Sir Adrian Boult, Roderick Williams, Peta Webb, Mark Stone and many more, ALL MY LIFE'S BURIED HERE is the definitive film account of a pioneering composer, folk song collector and dancer cut down in his prime on the battlefield of the Somme.

BONUS EXTRA FEATURES

- 20 page booklet including four newly commissioned articles on George Butterworth
- Bonus interview footage on Butterworth's role in the English folk revival, and the story of the Kinora Reels
- Three recordings of folk songs from George Butterworth's personal manuscript collection
